Media Policy

The Baddour Center welcomes opportunities to work with the news media to share information about the stories of Baddour residents and families and to serve as a source of educational information on topics regarding adults with intellectual and/or developmental disabilities.

Media members must contact a member of our public relations team to facilitate any interview with or to photograph or shoot video at The Baddour Center. Our work with adults with intellectual disabilities is highly confidential and laws require us to protect the privacy of the people with disabilities we serve and their families.

Our public relations team will work quickly to accommodate your request. A member of our team can help you with sources and locations for your interview.

If an interview takes place at The Baddour Center, a public relations staff member must be present to help you navigate the campus and coordinate all necessary photography or videography.
